A Month Behind Time.

Speaking of the axe-handle factory in this city, the Banner of yesterday says: "There has, very recently, sprung into existence here, in our city of Nashville, a the Clerk of the County Court issued marmost important manufacturing enterprise, riage licenses to the following named perso quietly and unostentatiously that but sons: few of our readers, perhaps, were aware that such an undertaking was even contemplated, much less to realize that it is already in actual operation and an estab

PRUIT DISTILLERIES.

Distilling to be Resumed. Mr P M. Radford, of the Revenue Dent in this district, returned to the ty yesterday evening after a trip through counties in the interest of the usiness. He has been on a surveying exbe counties of Robertson, Rutherford, Cannon, Coffee, Franklin and Lincoln. He represents the apple orchard as being full of fruit in all the counties. The peach crop, so far as distilling purposes are con-cerned, is a failure, Lincoln being the only county visited where there is enough to justify distilling of peach brandy. He in-forms us that there will be about fifteen stills run to the county, averaging a yield of fifteen gallons a day each so long as the fruit shall last. The prospects for corn were never so fattering, a superabundant yield being the result everywhere.

The distillers are anxious to operate this fall on quite an extensive scale. They assert that large quantities of corn of the immense crop can be got to market in no other way than by turning it into spirits. The hills and valleys are abounding in corn and fruits, and with a liberal construction of the law regulating distilleries, every still in the country will be brought into requisition, and the "wild-cats," as they are termed, will be unknown, or so few in number as to cause little or no annoyance. The people are hard at work, cheered with the abundant crops and harvests with which they have been blessed. Mr. R. estimated that if the grain distilleries are started, untrammelled with technical restrictions, as soon as the fruit s used up Franklin and Lincoln counties alone will yield from this source a revenue to the general government of two hundred thousand dollars a year, besides giving a handsome compensation to the distille and to all others concerned in the manufacture of spirits. Pitiable Sight in the Wilderness. The Franklin Review of the 11th inst. says: As we were passing through "the wilderness," about fifty miles west of this place, one day last week, we met with a most pitiable and touching sight. In this barren desert we passed a very dilapidated and disgustingly loathsome hut. An insane woman was sitting in front of the cabin; her clothes were dirty and torn; she was barefooted, and her uncombed hair was disheveled and brown from exposure, her eyes glared furiously, and her countenance was distracted and wild When the agency of the first state of the first grows more luxuriantly and repidly. Ledies who have once tried of Bank. par Georgia Railroad and wild When the same we approaching the first state of the first grows more luxuriantly and rapidly. Ledies who have once tried of Bank. par Georgia Railroad and Copes Hank. When she saw us approaching, she started towards us, screaming like a demon, and then she stopped suddenly and walked off quietly to the hut. How deplorable and touching it is to see a human being with reason dethroned. To see a corpse it is not so distressing. For what is man or woman without reason—a world without a sun, a ship without rudder, with full sails, that must be driven to the wave or stranded upon upon the beach.

The Effect of the War on Commerc A London letter says within a few weeks there will be a great number of failures throughout Great Britain and the whole

The London Economist, of the latest date eceived, remarks: "The borrowings of the Great Powers are beginning with wonderful rapidity. France has opened a credit of £22,000,000, Germany £20,000,000, and the effect of this must be to raise the value of money throughout the world, and the future loans will evidently be on an im nense sale. On the whole, therefore, would not be seen that the borrowings of oreign nations of us would precede the renittances of foreign nations to us; and though no doubt we shall untimately re ceive a considerable sum of foreign say. ings, yet the effect of these will be always more than counteracted by the loans whic in one form or other we shall make to the elligerents, and for the present we shall be lending more than we are receiving. London may be during the war the cheap est money market, but no doubt it will b a dear money market in comparison with that of recent years.
